Growing Network, Growing Museums

The FRAME network added four new museums during late 2015: two in France and two in North America. The Museum of Fine Arts, Houston and the Indianapolis Museum of Art are excited to join the network on the North American side.

Founded in 1883, the IMA is among the ten oldest and ten largest encyclopedic art museums in the United States. With more than 54,000 objects spanning 5,000 years of history, the IMA has numerous special exhibition spaces which regularly display works from both the Museum's permanent collection and other institutions. The 2014 exhibition Face to Face: The Neo-Impressionist Portrait, 1889-1904 showcased the IMA's significant collection of Neo-Impressionist paintings—one of the largest public collections in America. In 2015, the IMA hosted the traveling exhibition Dream Cars: Innovative Design, Visionary Ideas, featuring rare concept cars from the 1930s to the 21st century. Most recently, the IMA exhibited its significant collection of woodblock prints from German-born printmaker Gustave Baumann in Gustave Baumann, German Craftsman - American Artist.

Tracing its origins to 1900, the Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, is one of the largest cultural institutions in the country. The main campus, located in the heart of Houston's Museum District, comprises the Audrey Jones Beck Building, the Caroline Wiess Law Building, the Glassell School of Art, and the Lillie and Hugh Roy Cullen Sculpture Garden. The Beck and Law buildings are connected underground by the Wilson Tunnel, which features James Turrell's iconic installation The Light Inside. Additional resources include a repertory cinema, two significant libraries, public archives, and a newly redesigned MFA Shop and MFA Café. Nearby, two house museums—Bayou Bend Collection and Gardens, and Rienzi—present collections of American and European decorative arts. The encyclopedic collections of the Museum are especially strong in Pre-Columbian and African gold; Renaissance and Baroque painting and sculpture; 19th-and 20th-century art; photography; and Latin American art. The Museum is also home to the International Center for the Arts of the Americas (ICAA), a leading research institute for 20th-century Latin American and Latino art.
