Update proposal of the “FRAMEworks” page [now open to every FRAME member and not only educators] – Formatting a suggestion of the Plan Implementation Committee:

“FRAMEworks” are a series of deliverables that promote the innovative ways that transatlantic cultural dialogue and international collaborations can benefit museums of the 21st century.

Through these useful tools, FRAME professionals share their recommendations and practical advice drawn from partnerships among member museums in the extensive FRAME network of intellectual resources on both sides of the Atlantic.

FRAME encourages these professional exchanges among museum staff in its network and provides the catalytic support necessary for research and the development of a wide array of ground-breaking projects and programs.

Depending on subjects, needs and wills determined by the members, “FRAMEworks” can include:

- Lectures; panel discussions; workshops; articles; online guides; catalogues, etc.
- They can give rise to virtual or in-person seminars; study days; symposiums.
- They are accessible to FRAME members and to a general audience.
